

Developers aware of water issue

I WAS pleased to see that the issue of water supply and future development in Ashford is being addressed by Kent County Council (Fears for water supply, October 28), but would like to point out that not all new homes will pose a threat.

Responsible developers in Ashford will rise to the challenge of designing homes, shops and offices that use as little water as possible, and are sensitive to the local environment.

ZEDHomes' proposal for the former Powergen site on Gasworks Lane demonstrates that it can be done: it includes measures to reduce water usage by 65 per cent compared with conventional developments, and will create a new riverside walk along the River Stour.

Further details on our scheme can be viewed on our website: www.zedhomes.com/html/ashford/

Michael Schwartz, ZedHomes